Jamie Webster – Senior Director

Jamie Webster leads IHS' global short-term oil markets team with a geographically dispersed group of professionals. Jamie came to IHS through the acquisition of PFC Energy in 2013, where he ran that firm's global oil markets services. His work integrates oil market fundamentals with geopolitics and economics to provide a complete view of the current and future oil market. Located in Washington DC, he regularly interacts with OPEC members as well as US policymakers - an increasingly important channel as US oil production growth is changing the landscape of oil supply and prices.

He was one of the co-authors of the IHS study: "US Crude Oil Export Decision: Assessing the impact of the export ban and free trade on the US Economy". He has also led several large consulting projects that look at the changes in the oil market and how companies may react. Jamie has testified multiple times in front of the US Congress as spoken on global energy issues for the Aspen Institute, CNBC's Power Lunch, CNN's The Situation Room, World News Tonight and is frequently quoted in the media.

Previously Jamie was with Argus Media where he led a business unit focused on the inter-fuel dynamics of US power generation markets and how they would be impacted by economics and policy choices. Prior to this he was a project developer with Beacon Energy where he developed energy infrastructure projects in North America and Europe.
