

Bio for Lucas Koach
Director of Public Policy and Advocacy
Food for the Hungry

Lucas Koach is Director of Public Policy and Advocacy for Food for the Hungry \(FH\) based out in FH's Washington, DC Service Center. In his role, he creates strategies for FH's engagement with the U.S. government, multilateral institutions, and other key domestic and international stakeholders. He educates audiences on FH's programming and advocates for smart international relief and development policy. He designs and implements FH's advocacy by building sectorial and constituent coalitions nationally and internationally. As an ordained Anglican priest, Koach walks with faith and policy leaders, exposing them to issues of extreme poverty and the role the faith community plays in relief and development. Over the course of his career, Koach integrates his diverse experience in ministry, non-profit, business and political settings. He holds an MA from Denver Seminary, and graduated magna cum laude as an Honors Scholar in Government and International Studies from West Virginia Wesleyan. Koach lives in Arlington, VA with his wife and two children.

