

Jesse Fink, an entrepreneur committed to solving environmental and social challenges with multi-stakeholder engagement, has been dedicated to aligning investments with his philanthropic goals since 2001. In 2006 he co-founded MissionPoint Capital Partners, a private investment firm focused on financing the transition to a low-carbon economy. In 2014, MissionPoint Partners was formed to guide other families and foundations in their pursuit of impact.

As a Co-Founder and Trustee of The Fink Family Foundation, his venture philanthropy provides guidance, investment and strategic advice to social entrepreneurs. Partnering with his wife, Betsy, they have seed funded innovations and pilots at the intersections of the environment, food systems and resilience. In 2015, the Foundation seed funded, ReFED, which galvanized a group of like-minded funders to create a Roadmap for food waste reduction in the USA.

His professional career involved developing innovative business models including co-founding Priceline.com, and serving as founding COO. Jesse graduated from SUNY College of Environmental Science and Forestry and received an MBA from Syracuse University.
