

Sam Bankman-Fried is the co-founder and chief executive officer of FTX.com, one of the largest digital-asset trading platforms in the world. Sam co-founded the company in 2019 and subsequently co-founded FTX US in 2020 in order to service U.S. customers. Sam is also the chief executive of FTX US. The business was established in order to build a digital-asset trading platform and exchange with a better user experience, equitable access, customer protection, and innovative products, and to provide a trading platform robust enough for professional trading firms and intuitive enough for first-time users.

Sam has personally committed to donating 99% of his wealth and founded FTX Foundation, which has already given over $100 million this year to alleviate global poverty, provide ventilators to countries ravaged by covid, bank the unbanked, and combat climate change by ensuring FTX is carbon-neutral.

Prior to co-founding FTX, Sam founded Alameda Research, a market-making firm in digital assets, and prior to that worked with Jane Street Capital from 2014 until 2017.

Sam has been recognized as a young entrepreneur on the Forbes 30 under 30 list in 2021, and is an important contributor and one of the leading voices and growth drivers in the digital asset ecosystem.

Sam graduated from MIT with a degree in Physics.
