

Jeff Kippley

Vice President

Jeff Kippley, of Aberdeen, South Dakota, is a fifth-generation family farmer currently serving his second term as Vice President of National Farmers Union (NFU), an organization that advocates for family agriculture. Jeff grew up on a crop and cattle operation in northeastern South Dakota and returned to the farm in 2001 after graduating from Black Hills State University with degrees in accounting and business administration.

Jeff currently manages the family farm alongside his father, John, where they raise cattle, corn, and soybeans. Jeff and his wife, Rachel, also operate a tax preparation service, The Kippley Group, which serves family farmers and the local community.

Jeff's dedication to advocating for fair prices and policies that support farmers and ranchers extends beyond his work on the farm and in the tax business. His role as Vice President of NFU involves working closely with policymakers and industry leaders to address the challenges facing rural communities and to ensure a sustainable and equitable future for American agriculture.

In addition to their professional commitments, Jeff and Rachel are deeply involved in their community and church. They have four children, Noah, Titus, Aaron, and Moriah, who also participate in the family's farming operations and community activities. The Kippley family embodies the spirit of rural America, balancing their agricultural heritage with active civic engagement and a commitment to supporting their fellow farmers and ranchers.
