Patrick Johnson
Producer, Past Chairman of National Cotton Council (2024)

Patrick Johnson, a producer from Tunica, MS, served as 2024 National Cotton Council Chairman.

Johnson is a National Cotton Council Cotton Leadership Program graduate and past participant in the NCC's Producer Information Exchange program. He has served as a NCC director and on multiple NCC committees as well as the American Cotton Producers chairman.

Johnson is a partner in Cypress Brake Planting Co., a family farming operation in the Mississippi Delta. The diversified farm produces cotton, rice, corn, soybeans, and wheat. Joining the operation in 1996, Johnson has sought to improve conservation and efficiency in the operation through the implementation of new technology and best management practices. In addition to the farming enterprise, Johnson is involved in several ag related businesses including Buck Island Seed Co., Three Way Gin, and Tunica Air Inc., an aerial application service.

He previously served on the EPA Farm Ranch and Rural Communities Committee and currently is a member of the EPA's Pesticide Policy Dialogue Committee. He recently completed a term as President of Delta Council, a regional organization promoting agriculture and economic development in the Mississippi Delta. Johnson has served on the FSA County Committee in Tunica, is a director for Tunica County Farm Bureau, and is a Commissioner for the Mississippi Department of Environmental Quality.

Johnson received a Bachelor of Science from the University of Mississippi. He and his wife, Emily, live in Tunica, MS.
