Wheaton, MN

Hannah Hasbargen is from Minnesota. She lives in the Red River Valley on a family-operated farm where they produce corn, soybeans, sugar beets, wheat, and alfalfa. Her family has a commercial feedlot where they finish steers and heifers for market and also raise a small flock of Ile de France sheep for breeding stock. She will be graduating from Wheaton Area High School in May and plans on attending the University of North Dakota in the fall of 2015 for a double major in Accounting and International Agriculture Marketing.

Throughout her childhood, she remembers going to "work" for the day with her dad and either helping with chores or just riding in the tractor with him. Her interest and love for livestock started at a very young age and is something she is still passionate about today. She began to show livestock competitively in 4-H Cloverbuds when she was six years old. She has been an active member of 4-H for 13 years. Throughout the years, she has shown market beef, heifers, ewe lambs, market lambs, market hogs, dairy steers, and horses. Her love for 4-H continued to grow and she expanded her horizons by holding various leadership positions within her county 4-H club and participating in numerous projects. For the past three years, she has attended the Minnesota State Fair with livestock demonstrations and earned Overall Grand Champion on all of them. She also judges general livestock and dairy at various competitions in the Midwest.

Besides 4-H, Hannah participates in sports, youth government, theater, youth-led organizations including FCCLA and FFA, and is very active in her church and school. All of these activities have shaped her to be an innovative, driven, confident and passionate leader in her community and agriculture.
