

Helen Boyle

Helen Boyle is a representative and member of the Basic Education Coalition, a group of leading U.S.-based organizations and academic institutions working together to promote global peace and prosperity through education.

Boyle is also the Vice President and Director of the Education Development Center's International Development Division (IDD). An experienced development practitioner, Boyle has helped identify and shape EDC's strategic directions in international education since she joined the organization in 1991. As the Middle East and North Africa Center director, Boyle expanded EDC's technical work in the region and oversaw multimillion-dollar USAID-funded programs. As EDC's senior literacy advisor, she headed the Basic Education and Literacy Team and led the development process for Read Right Now, EDC's signature approach to early grade reading and writing in resource-lean environments.

Boyle is the author of Quranic Schools: Agents of Preservation and Change and has published numerous articles on Islamic education and on early grade literacy in developing country contexts. In addition to her BA in English literature and French language from Boston College, Boyle holds an ED.M. in international education from the Harvard Graduate School of Education and a PhD in comparative and social analysis in education from the University of Pittsburgh.

