

Angela S. Cox

Angela serves as the Vice President of Administration at Arctic Slope Native Association where she oversees the human resource and social services departments. In her role she administers 10 grant programs including the childcare development fund, Indian child welfare, and a medical and funeral assistance program. She also handles local communication with production of a quarterly newsletter, an annual report and social media.

Angela currently sits on Board for the Alaska Community Foundation and the Foraker Group Operations Board. Both organizations are dedicated to strengthening the work of nonprofits within Alaska. Angela has a BA in Communication from the Edward R. Murrow College of Communication at Washington State University and a MPA from New York University's Graduate School of Public Service.
