

Mark Mustoe

Bio

Mark Mustoe is the co-owner and manager of Clearwater Seed, a native grass and forb seed production company. Mark has a Bachelor of Science Degree in Animal Science from the University of Idaho. He owns a dryland farm in North Central Idaho where he grew up growing grass and forb seed crops. Through Clearwater Seed, Mark markets seed throughout the US, Canada, and abroad. He works with 20 small farmers locally who collectively grow seed for 50 different species of grasses and forbs, on some 4000 acres, most being used for restoration and reclamation purpose throughout the West. Agencies such as the BLM and Forest Service purchase seed for those much needed restoration projects after fires as well as land enhancements for wildlife and competitive weed control. Marks future plans include continuing to grow and market quality grass and forb seed and staying involved in industry issues of importance.
