

Joshua Saks
Legislative Director
National Advocacy Center
Washington, DC

Josh serves as National Wildlife Federation's Legislative Director, helping set strategy and coordinate outreach to Members of Congress on key campaign priorities, including clean water and wetlands issues, energy policy, federal appropriations for wildlife conservation, protection of public lands in Alaska and the Rocky Mountain West and disaster preparedness and mitigation policies. He joined NWF in 2010 as a Senior Legislative Representative for water resources campaigns where he worked on aquatic ecosystem restoration of America's Great Waters, Clean Water Act defense, Army Corps reform and more.

Josh has presented on environmental issues before the U.S. Congress and the National Academy of Sciences; at a number of colleges and universities including Georgetown University and Columbia University Law School; and has presented to many conservation conferences including the Great lakes Healing Our Waters Conference, Restore America's Estuaries Conference, and the Risk Management Institute Conference. He has been published on environmental issues in the New York Times, The Economist and many other publications and has appeared as an expert on MSNBC, NBC Nightly News, CNN and others.

Prior to NWF, Josh was the federal affairs associate for the Chesapeake Bay Foundation, a Policy Analyst at the Clean Air Council in Philadelphia and the PA Representative for the National Environmental Trust.
