

Steve Kline, Director of Government Relations for the Theodore Roosevelt Conservation Partnership (TRCP) joined the Partnership in April of 2011. Steve has spent his entire professional career in Washington, D.C. developing and implementing successful policy advocacy strategies for a variety of conservation organizations.

Steve has also advised political candidates at the national, state, and local level, and served as an elected delegate to the 2008 Republican National Convention.

Steve has a Bachelor's degree in Political Science from St. Mary's College of Maryland, and a Master's degree, cum laude, in Government from The Johns Hopkins University.

Steve is a seventh generation Marylander, who along with his wife Kim and their kids Alexander and Emily make their home on the Eastern Shore of the Chesapeake Bay.