

Tamara Mann, Ph.D. is currently the John Strassburger Fellow in American Studies at Columbia University, where she teaches in the Freedom and Citizenship Program. Professor Mann received her doctorate in history from Columbia University and a master's degree in theological studies from Harvard Divinity School. She specializes in the history of philanthropy, health care, and aging. Her dissertation, Honor Thy Father and Mother: Defining and Solving Old Age in America, was nominated for Columbia University's 2014 Bancroft Award. In 2009, she received the K. Patricia Cross Future Leaders Award from the Association of American Colleges and Universities. Her current research interests include the ethical repercussions of how Americans have defined life, death, and care.