

Steve Holmer, Vice President of Policy, American Bird Conservancy. Steve has over 30 years of experience working to conserve National Forests, Public Lands, and endangered wildlife. He came to American Bird Conservancy in 2006 from The Wilderness Society and previously served as Campaign Coordinator of Western Ancient Forest Campaign/American Lands Alliance during the 1990s working on the Northwest Forest Plan and other policies to conserve old growth and mature forest habitat for the threatened Northern Spotted Owl and Marbled Murrelet. In addition to protecting species on western public lands such as Greater Sage-Grouse, Steve directs American Bird Conservancy's policy division that works to reduce threats to birds from collisions, cats, energy development, and pesticides, and supports program funding and policies that benefit bird conservation.
