

Biography for Steve Holmer

Steve Holmer is the Vice President of Policy for American Bird Conservancy where he has worked for the past thirteen years. In addition to overseeing policy programs and staff, Holmer is also a registered lobbyist and responsible for issues including collisions with power lines and towers, endangered species such as Greater Sage-Grouse, Marbled Murrelet, renewable energy, forest protection, and migratory bird protection. Holmer is a graduate of Penn State University, and has worked in the conservation community working on habitat and wildlife conservation since 1988.