

Jeff M. Smith

Director of South Asia Programs, Kraemer Strategy Fellow

Jeff is the Kraemer Strategy Fellow at the American Foreign Policy Council (AFPC) and the author of a forthcoming book on China-India relations in the 21st century. He also serves as the Managing Editor of the World Almanac of Islamism and the editor of AFPC's South Asia Security Monitor. He has provided briefings and consulted for the Pentagon, State Department and intelligence community.

Smith's writings have appeared in the Wall Street Journal Asia, U.S. News and World Report, the Harvard International Review, Yale Global, CNN, the Washington Times, Defense News, Jane's Intelligence Review, World Politics Review, The Diplomat, the Far Eastern Economic Review, Asia Times, and The Hindu, among others. His interviews and commentary can be seen on the BBC, Fox News, CNBC, the Voice of America, al-Hurra, Agence France-Presse, and Pakistan's Dawn News. He is also the chair of the Young Professionals in Foreign Policy South Asia Discussion Group.

Smith has an MPIA from the University of Pittsburgh's Graduate School of Public and International Affairs and studied abroad at Oxford University in 2005. He has lectured at the graduate and undergraduate level.