

Skanda Amarnath is the co-founder and Executive Director of Employ America, a macroeconomic research and advocacy organization that advances pro-growth policies for the full employment of America's workers, resources, and capabilities. He was previously a Vice President at MKP Capital Management, a global macro hedge fund, where he served as an economist and investment strategist, with a specific focus on North American and antipodean economies and fixed income markets. He previously served as a Research Analyst within the Capital Markets function of the Research Group at the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. He has undergraduate degrees in Applied Mathematics and Economics from Columbia University, and holds a Juris Doctor degree from Columbia Law School.