

Michael Mosier co-founded Arktouros pllc, a legal boutique of former federal prosecutors dedicated to civil society, financial integrity, and emergent technology. He is a partner in ex/ante, an early-stage fund investing in agentic technology that advances democratic resilience and personal agency, including deep-fake detection, cybersecurity and cryptography. He has twice been the first in-house counsel at tech companies: Chainalysis blockchain analytics and Espresso Systems building configurable private computation and auditability for digital assets using zero-knowledge cryptography.

In public service, Michael served as Acting Director, Deputy Director, and the first Digital Innovation Officer of the U.S. Treasury's Financial Crimes Enforcement Network (FinCEN). Previously, he served as Associate Director of Treasury's Office of Foreign Assets Control (OFAC), leading the Office of Compliance & Enforcement and Office of Sanctions Policy & Implementation. Before Treasury, Michael was a Deputy Chief in the Department of Justice's Money Laundering & Asset Recovery Section and served at the White House National Security Council as a Director for transnational organized crime. He has been an adjunct professor (Advanced Evidence for Trial) at Georgetown University Law Center and began his public service as a prosecutor with the Manhattan District Attorney's Office.
