

Derrick Hollie is the president of Reaching America, an organization he founded to address complex social issues impacting the black community. Hollie is an award-winning education and outreach campaign leader for the federal government, frequent television guest commentator, and business leader within the private and nonprofit sectors. Mr. Hollie is also frequent witness before the U.S. Congress, providing testimony on energy poverty and other issues that resonates with lawmakers from both sides of the aisle. Most recently, Mr. Hollie served in a Senior Executive Service role as Director of The Office of Small and Disadvantaged Business Utilization for the U.S. Dept. of Transportation. His work sparks significant enthusiasm across political and cultural and social backgrounds