

Francis Chan is an Associate Professor in the Department of Integrative Biology at Oregon State University (OSU). He is also the Director of the joint NOAA-OSU Cooperative Institute for Marine Ecosystem and Resources Research. Chan holds a PhD in ecology from Cornell University. Chan's areas of research are in ecosystem ecology and biogeochemistry. He has worked extensively in Oregon's coastal ocean with 2 decades of experience in the study of low oxygen zones and their ecological impacts.