

Cassandra Farley is a higher education administrator and research compliance officer with experience building and leading institution-wide programs that safeguard research integrity and support ethical conduct in research. As Senior Director of Research Integrity, Security and Compliance at the University of Florida, Ms. Farley serves in multiple key institutional roles, including Research Integrity Officer, Research Security Officer, and Empowered Official for Export Controls. Ms. Farley specializes in policy development and program implementation, and in partnership with UF senior leadership, she led UF's efforts to design and implement the University of Florida's research security program in 2021. In addition to the research security program, Ms. Farley also oversees several other major compliance programs, including research misconduct, responsible conduct of research, conflicts of interest, and export control compliance.

Ms. Farley holds an MBA from the University of South Florida and a BA in Economics from the University of Florida. She is also a Certified Compliance and Ethics Professional and an active contributor to national organizations supporting research integrity, export controls, and research security.