

Bradford Kelley is a Shareholder in Littler Mendelson's Washington, DC office, where he specializes in advising clients about emerging technologies, including artificial intelligence. Before joining Littler, Brad was Chief Counsel to a Commissioner at the U.S. Equal Employment Opportunity Commission where he provided legal and policy advice on the agency's Initiative on Artificial Intelligence and Algorithmic Fairness. Previously, Brad served as a senior official in the U.S. Department of Labor's Wage and Hour Division. His work on AI has been published in the Harvard Journal on Legislation, Stanford Law & Policy Review, Yale Journal on Regulation Bulletin, University of Miami Law Review, Marquette Law Review, and several other leading legal journals. Prior to his legal career, Brad served as a U.S. Army infantry and intelligence officer and is a veteran of the Iraq War.