

Akash Chougule is President of the Foundation for Research on Equal Opportunity (FREOPP), a 501c3 nonpartisan think-tank dedicated to uplifting Americans on the bottom half of the socioeconomic ladder. FREOPP also serves as the institutional home of the Freedom Conservatism movement. He also serves as a Senior Fellow at the Institute for the American Worker, a 501c3 nonpartisan labor policy think-tank.

Akash was previously Vice President of Government Affairs at Americans for Prosperity, the nation's largest free-market grassroots advocacy organization. Prior to AFP, Akash was Vice President of the Economic Opportunity Initiative at the Stand Together Chamber of Commerce. Prior to Stand Together, Akash was a Republican policy staffer on the US House of Representatives Education and Workforce Committee leading labor relations, wage-and-hour, and trade issues during the first introduction of the Protecting the Right to Organize Act, the $15 minimum wage, and the United States-Mexico-Canada trade agreement, among other consequential policies. Prior to the US House, Akash was Director of Policy at AFP. He is a regular contributor on the Fox News Channel, Fox Business Network, C-SPAN's Washington Journal, NPR, and others, and his writing has appeared in the Wall Street Journal, USA Today, the New York Post, and several other major publications.

A proud son of first-generation immigrants and a product of the American Dream, Akash was born and raised in East Greenwich, Rhode Island. He received his Bachelor's degree from Boston College, where he was also a four-year member of the varsity cross country/track and field team, and received his Master's from George Washington University. Akash was previously named to Forbes "30 Under 30" list for Law & Policy.
