

Short Bio

Dr. Katie J. Wells is a Postdoctoral Fritz Fellow at the Tech & Society Initiative at Georgetown University. She writes about how tech affects the way we live in cities, and especially how we govern them. Wells is an author of Disrupting D.C.: The Rise of Uber and the Fall of the City (Princeton University Press, August 2023). She has a long record of designing and conducting qualitative research projects about the gig economy with students and peers. For this work, she has been recognized with a Georgetown University Faculty & Staff Career Champion Award, the Ashby Award, and a PROSE Award. She has a deep commitment to public outreach and sharing the findings of her scholarship with diverse audiences. She has discussed the real-time impacts of her research in 100+ media stories in outlets including The Washington Post, NPR, and ABC National News. She received her PhD in Geography from the Maxwell School at Syracuse University.