

Andrew Stettner is a Director of Economy and Jobs at The Century Foundation. Andrew is a catalyst for change, working inside and outside government, to win historic policy achievements for working families and to improve technology and delivery of benefits. Andrew leads TCF's team working on unemployment insurance, labor rights, workforce development, disability and the economy.

Andrew most recently served as a Biden Administration appointee and Director of Unemployment Insurance Modernization at the U.S. Department of Labor. There he led the implementation of the American Rescue Plan including $780 million in UI modernization grants to the states, improving customer experience, access to benefits and fraud prevention. As a Senior Fellow at the Century Foundation and Deputy Director of the National Employment Law Project, Andrew authored extensive research on the future of work and led successful state and federal policy campaigns to modernize workforce protections. In addition, Andrew held leadership positions at Single Stop and Seedco, successfully building and deploying benefits screening technology that unlocked tens of millions of dollars in public benefits. Andrew was named to the Fed100 most influential leaders in Federal technology by GovExec in 2024, and is a graduate of Georgetown and Columbia Universities.
