

Biography

Scott Szymendera, Ph.D.

Scott Szymendera is an analyst at the Congressional Research Service where he provides research and analysis to Congress on issues related to workers' compensation and occupational safety and health. Scott received his bachelor's degree from the University of Maryland and his master's and doctoral degrees from Michigan State University, all in political science. Prior to his federal service, Scott was an analyst at the Rutgers University Program for Disability Research covering a variety of issues including workers' compensation.