

Patrick Howe

Executive Vice President, Nuclear Care Partners

Patrick Howe is a seasoned medical device and healthcare executive with over 40 years of combined clinical and business experience. As the Executive Vice President at Nuclear Care Partners, Patrick leads strategic initiatives to expand access to specialized in-home care, education, and advocacy for former Department of Energy (DOE) Nuclear Weapons workers. He is particularly focused on groundbreaking programs like Care+ Kidney, which provides specialized support for patients navigating chronic kidney disease (CKD) and end-stage renal disease (ESRD). Patrick's leadership is defined by a "clinically-based" approach, bridging the gap between medical necessity and commercial strategy. His career began with 19 years of clinical service, starting as a Combat Medic in the United States Army (18th Airborne Corps), providing comprehensive clinical support to military personnel in the field serving as a combat medic in trauma support, including helicopter and ground ambulance medivac, for the 85th Evac Hospital. Following his military service, he transitioned to civilian healthcare as an Emergency Room Registered Nurse and later as a Physician Extender in Interventional Radiology at the prestigious Mayo Clinic in Rochester, MN.

Over the last 20 years, Patrick has held several executive leadership roles within the MedTech industry, including:

- Chief Commercialization Officer at Securisyn Medical.
- President & Founder of Patrick Howe Consulting LLC, providing executive-level support to startup and mid-range MedTech companies.
- Vice President of Commercialization at NexGen Medical.
- Global Vice President of Sales & Marketing at Bio2 Medical.
- Group Product Director at Argon Medical/Angiotech Pharmaceuticals.

A resourceful and compassionate leader, Patrick is known for his ability to transform complex clinical concepts into actionable sales and marketing strategies. He is a recipient of the Leadership Innovation Award and the President's Club Sales Achievement award, reflecting his commitment to achieving aggressive growth goals without compromising integrity or patient safety.

Patrick holds an A.A.S. in Nursing from the Mayo School of Allied Health at Rochester Community College.