

Douglas DePeppe is a data privacy and protection, and sports law attorney with Buchalter LLP. His position there is as Special Counsel in the Firm's Denver office and he leads the firm's national practice in Cyber Investigations and Data Rights Enforcement. Previously in his career, he has served various national cyber operations offices in the US Government, and the US Military. His experience and accolades include: service on the 2009 White House 60 - day Cyberspace Policy Review, as part of the Lawyers Working Group; induction into the Information Sharing Hall of Fame, ISAO Standards Organization (2018); Masters Degree level cybersecurity program development in academia and adjunct professor at UMGC; and arguing on behalf of college athletes before Chief Judge Wilken in the House v. NCAA antitrust lawsuit. He also invented and is prosecuting a patent related to digital identity ownership rights with applications for identity protection in cybersecurity and sports data. Finally, Mr. DePeppe co-founded the Cyber Resilience Institute and its Sports-ISAO Program, which provided cyber intelligence support during global sports events, including several Olympics and World Cup tournaments. He has spoken as a Keynote and a panelist at cybersecurity conferences on five continents, and has published and been quoted in Forbes, National Public Radio, Mondaq, Sports Illustrated, Sportico, Datos Insights, CSO Online, Fintech Times, Cambridge University Press, New York Times, Lexology, and other publications. On a personal level, he has been a life-long soccer enthusiast, played four years at the University of Rhode Island, and has coached youth soccer for more than 20 years.