

David A. Slykhuis, Ph.D., is a 22-year veteran in higher education who holds a doctoral degree in science education, with much of his research focused on educational technology. He is currently the Dean of the Dewar College of Education and Human Services at Valdosta State University in Georgia. He is the chair of the National Technology Leadership Summit and former chair of AACTE's (American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education) standing committee on innovation and technology. Slykhuis is also a past president of the Society for Information Technology and Teacher Education (SITE). He is one of the four researchers who developed the Teacher Educator Technology Competencies and was awarded the AACTE Edward C. Pomeroy Award for outstanding contributions to teacher education.