

Ashish K. Jha, MD, M.P.H.

Dr. Ashish Jha is a physician, health policy researcher, and the third Dean of the Brown University School of Public Health. Before joining Brown, he was the K.T. Li Professor of Global Health at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health and Director of the Harvard Global Health Institute. He is recognized globally as an expert on pandemic preparedness and response and has led research around Ebola and is now on the frontlines of the COVID-19 response, leading national and international analysis of key issues and advising state and federal policy makers. Dr. Jha was born in Pursaulia, Bihar, India and moved to the United States in 1983. He graduated with a B.A. in economics from Columbia University, an M.D. from Harvard Medical School, and a Master of Public Health at the Harvard T.H. Chan School of Public Health. He was elected to the National Academy of Medicine in 2013.