

Justin Jacobs, Ph.D.
Associate Professor
Department of History
American University

Justin Jacobs is a historian of modern China. His research concerns the northwestern Chinese borderlands, comparative Eurasian empires, and the historical politics of archaeological expeditions. He is the author of Indiana Jones in History: From Pompeii to the Moon (IndianaJonesInHistory.com) and Xinjiang and the Modern Chinese State. He is currently completing his next book, The Compensations of Plunder: How China Lost Its Treasures. At AU, he teaches courses on modern China, East Asian civilization, Indiana Jones in History, and the Japanese Empire. He also serves as editor of The Silk Road, the journal of the Silk Road Foundation, and hosts "Beyond Huaxia," a podcast on East Asian history.
