

Dr Lynn Kuok is the Lee Kuan Yew Chair in Southeast Asia Studies at the Brookings Institution. Her research focuses on the geopolitics of the Indo-Pacific, particularly US–China–Southeast Asia ties and the South China Sea; Europe’s engagement with the Indo-Pacific; and the interplay between international law and power.

Previously, she was the Shangri-La Dialogue Senior Fellow for Asia-Pacific Security at the International Institute for Strategic Studies and an adjunct professor at Georgetown University’s School of Foreign Service, where she taught a course on the International Law of the Sea and East Asian politics. She has held fellowships at Yale Law School, Harvard Law School, Harvard Kennedy School, the Center for Strategic and International Studies, and the Centre for International Law.

Dr Kuok served as Editor-in-Chief of three major journals: the Asia-Pacific Regional Security Assessment (with Dr Tim Huxley), the Cambridge Review of International Affairs and the Singapore Law Review.

Her writing has appeared in leading publications, including Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, Survival, The Wall Street Journal, and Nikkei Asia. She is a regular contributor to broadcast and print media, such as the BBC, Bloomberg, CNBC, Al Jazeera, Reuters, The New York Times, and The Washington Post, and has presented her work at Harvard, Stanford, Columbia, and Cambridge, among other institutions.

Dr Kuok has provided expert testimony before the US-China Economic and Security Review Commission, the UK House of Lords International Relations and Defence Committee, and the UK House of Commons Defence Committee. She has also lectured at national diplomatic and defence institutions, including the US Department of State’s Foreign Service Institute, the UK’s Royal College of Defence Studies, and the Australian War College.

She is regularly invited to speak on or chair ministerial-level panels at high-level international forums, notably the Munich Security Conference and the World Economic Forum. In 2024, she delivered the opening keynote at the Indo-Pacific Chiefs of Defense Conference in Hawaii.

Dr Kuok currently serves on the World Economic Forum’s Global Future Council on the Future of Geopolitics and previously served on its Global Future Council on the Future of International Security, reflecting her continued role in shaping global policy discussions.

Dr Kuok earned her doctorate from the University of Cambridge.