Biography:

Mokhtar Awad is a Research Fellow in the Program on Extremism at George Washington University's Center for Cyber & Homeland Security. He specializes in Islamist and Salafist groups in the Middle East region, regional politics, with a special focus on emerging violent extremist organizations and their ideas as well as insurgencies in countries like Egypt. He has published analyses and conducted field research on Islamist groups and political dynamics in Tunisia, Jordan, Lebanon, Syria, and Egypt. Prior to joining the Program on Extremism, Mokhtar worked as a research associate at the Center for American Progress, and before that he was a junior fellow in the Middle East Program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. Awad serves as a consultant with the Center for American Progress.

Awad's work has been published in Foreign Policy and the Washington Post, among other publications. He has been quoted widely in several publication and contributes regularly to news networks like Al-Arabiya. His studies have been published in Current Trends in Islamist Ideology journal, the CTC Sentinel, and by Carnegie Middle East Center. Awad is fluent in Arabic.