

Hanin Ghaddar

Hanin Ghaddar is the inaugural Friedmann Visiting Fellow at The Washington Institute for Near East Policy, where she writes and focuses her research on Shia politics, Iran and Hezbollah throughout the Levant. Prior to joining TWI, Hanin was Managing Editor of NOW - English, an online magazine based in Beirut. She contributes regularly to a number of magazines and newspapers, including The Wall Street Journal and The Washington Post. Ghaddar is former nonresident fellow at the Rafik Hariri Center - The Atlantic Council (2015-2016), and a former Public Policy Scholar at the Woodrow Wilson International Center for Scholars (Fall 2012). Prior to joining NOW Lebanon in 2007, Ghaddar wrote for Assafir, Annahar and Al-Hayat newspapers and also worked as a researcher for the UNDP - regional office between 2002 and 2004. Ghaddar holds a Bachelor's degree in English Literature and a Master's degree in Middle Eastern Studies, both from the American University in Beirut.