

Andrew Exum is an executive at Hakluyt & Company, a global management consultancy. From 2015 until 2017, he was the deputy assistant secretary of defense for Middle East policy.

Andrew is a native of Chattanooga, Tennessee and attended the University of Pennsylvania on an Army ROTC scholarship. Accepting a commission into the infantry upon graduation, Andrew led a platoon of light infantry from the 10th Mountain Division into combat in Afghanistan following the September 11th attacks. He led a platoon of Rangers from the 75th Ranger Regiment as part of special operations task forces in Iraq and Afghanistan in 2003 and 2004, respectively.

After resigning from active duty following a serious injury suffered in training, Andrew earned a master's degree in Middle Eastern Studies from the American University of Beirut and a Ph.D. in War Studies from King's College, University of London. In addition to Beirut and London, Andrew has lived and studied in Cairo, Tangier, and Paris.

Andrew served as a civilian in the Department of Defense on a fellowship from the Council on Foreign Relations between 2012 and 2013. He then worked as a management consultant with Boston Consulting Group from 2013 to 2015 before returning to the Pentagon to serve from 2015 to 2017.

Andrew lives in Dallas, Texas with his wife and their three children.
