Question 4:

Since 2019, through my personal limited liability company, Jodi Vittori LLC, I am a sub-contractor on a federal grant to train Department of Defense (DoD) civilian personnel for its Ministry of Defense Advisor (MODA) program on issues of corruption and governance, including the role of arms exports in corruption and conflict. That sub-contract is through McKellar Corporation. Through this sub-contract, I earn less than $10,000 per year.

Question 5:

My work for Transparency International Defense and Security is funded solely by the Carnegie Corporation. Transparency International Defense and Security is a subset of Transparency International-UK and based in London, UK. Since 2018, TI-DS has accepted grants for its global work on the linkages of corruption and conflict from the following foreign government agencies: Swedish International Development Agency, UK Department for International Development, Dutch Ministry of Foreign Affairs, and the United Nations Defence Academy. None of these foreign government sources, however, have contributed to work on US arms exports.

For my work as a non-resident fellow at CEIP:

- Department for International Development, UK – Strengthening Evidence for Better Policymaking
 - £2,140,000 for the Democracy, Conflict and Governance Program
- Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade, Australia – Civic Activism
 - $234,020 for the Democracy, Conflict and Governance Program

Note: Jodi Vittori is affiliated with the Democracy, Conflict and Governance Program but is not funded directly by any of these grants and does no work on behalf of nor has any role in these projects.
