

Randa Slim is a senior fellow and the director of the Program on Conflict Resolution and Track II Dialogues at the Middle East Institute in Washington DC, and is a non-resident fellow at the Foreign Policy Institute of the Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies (SAIS). She works and publishes on regional and international issues of the Middle East with an emphasis on Lebanon, Syria and Iraq.

A former vice president of the International Institute for Sustained Dialogue, Slim has also been a senior program advisor at the Rockefeller Brothers Fund, a guest scholar at the United States Institute of Peace, a program director at Resolve, Inc, and a program officer at the Kettering Foundation.

A former member of the Dartmouth Conference US-Russian regional conflicts taskforce, she was involved from 1992-2005 in conflict prevention and management activities in Central Asia working in Tajikistan and the Ferghana Valley.

Since 2002, Slim has developed and managed a number of dialogue and peace-building projects in the Middle East including the Arab-American-European Dialogue (2004-2007), and a national reconciliation initiative in Iraq (2006-2009). She is the co-founder of the Arab Network for the Study of Democracy, a group of academics and civil society activists from eight Arab countries.

Currently, she organizes and moderates the Middle East Dialogue, a regional Track 1.5 initiative focusing on emerging political and security dynamics in the Middle East. She also co-moderates the US-Russia Middle East Dialogue, organized in cooperation with the Near East South Asia (NESA) Center for Strategic Studies at the National Defense University. Slim has also worked on the UN-mediated negotiations in Yemen (20015-16) as a consultant with the office of the UN Special Envoy for Yemen.

Slim earned her BS and MA degrees at the American University of Beirut and PhD at the University of North Carolina.

The author of several studies, book chapters and articles on Middle Eastern politics, dialogue processes and post-conflict peace building, Slim has written for, appeared with, or been cited by several media outlets in the U.S. and is a frequent commentator on Arab radio and TV outlets.
