

Frederic Wehrey is a senior fellow in the Middle East program at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace, where he focuses on geopolitics, security, and governance in Libya, North Africa, and the Gulf. His articles, essays, and reporting have appeared in the New York Review of Books, TIME, The Atlantic, the London Review of Books, the New Yorker, and the New York Times, among other outlets. He is the author of The Burning Shores: Inside the Battle for the New Libya (2018), which the New York Times called "the essential text on the country's disintegration." His previous book, Sectarian Politics in the Gulf: From the Iraq War to the Arab Uprisings (2013), was chosen as a "Best Book on the Middle East" by Foreign Affairs magazine. He has testified before the U.S. Senate and House of Representatives on multiple occasions and served as a consultant to the United Nations and other international organizations. Prior to joining Carnegie, he served for twenty-one years in the active and reserve components of the U.S. Air Force, with tours across the Middle East and Africa. He holds a doctorate in international relations from the University of Oxford and a master's degree in Near Eastern studies from Princeton University.