

András Simonyi is the Managing Director of the Center for Transatlantic Relations at the School of Advanced International Studies at Johns Hopkins University in Washington is former ambassador of Hungary to the United States and NATO. He has a long professional career in multilateral and bilateral diplomacy, international non-governmental and governmental organizations, as well as in the private sector. His focus has been the transatlantic relationship. He is an advocate of democracy and human rights, including the rights of LGBT people. He advocates a strong transatlantic relationship to which he does not see an alternative. He is a proponent of innovation in diplomatic activities, combining tradition with new radical ideas.