

Joanna Rohozinska is the Resident Program Director for Europe with the International Republican Institute. Based in Brussels she oversees IRI's Beacon Project, which focuses on building resilient democracies. Joanna has been engaged in programs in the post-Communist space for 20 years, living and working in several countries in the region, and joined IRI after more than a decade with the National Endowment for Democracy's Europe programme. She holds a graduate degree in Russian and European history from the University of Toronto where she focused on nationalism and foreign policy issues within the Russian and Soviet Empires.