

Julia Hall

Julia Hall is a human rights lawyer and Amnesty International's expert on criminal justice, counter-terrorism and human rights in Europe in Amnesty's international secretariat in London, England. Her current work focuses on accountability for human rights violations in countries with a history of political violence, including Northern Ireland, and for violations committed in the context of the global "war on terrorism."

Previously, Ms. Hall was senior legal counsel in the Terrorism and Counter-Terrorism Program at Human Rights Watch, where she worked from 1996-2009. During her tenure at HRW, she covered the conflicts in Northern Ireland and Bosnia, and researched migration and asylum issues in the European Union. After September 11, 2001, she covered counter-terrorism operations by the US and in Europe, including the military commissions and resettlement of Guantanamo Bay detainees. In July 2008, she monitored the military commission of Salim Hamdan, Osama bin Laden's former driver, at Guantanamo Bay.

Julia Hall has authored numerous reports, articles, and amicus briefs on a range of topics. She served on the research and editing team for Amnesty International's September 2013 report "Northern Ireland: Time to Deal with the Past" and authored a major research report on Northern Ireland titled "To Serve without Favor: Policing, Human Rights and Accountability in Northern Ireland" (Human Right Watch, 1997). In 1999, she appeared before the Independent Commission on Policing in Northern Ireland, chaired by Chris Patten.

Julia Hall has conducted sustained advocacy at the United Nations, Council of Europe, European Union, and at national level; and has served as an expert in individual cases before UN treaty-bodies, the European Court of Human Rights, the UK Special Immigration Appeals Commission, the Commission of Inquiry into the Actions of Canadian Officials in Relation to Maher Arar, and in US federal courts. She was a keynote speaker for European Parliament hearings in January 2011 and March 2012.

Julia Hall graduated from the State University of New York at Buffalo School of Law and is admitted to the bar in the state of New York. She currently lives in Buffalo, New York, and telecommutes to her London office daily. She travels widely in Europe and Central Asia.