

David Hong is a Global Senior Policy Analyst who leads global policy engagement at One Acre Fund, a nonprofit social enterprise that supplies smallholder farmers with the tools and financing they need to grow their way out of hunger and poverty. Previously, David analyzed donor agricultural policies at the ONE Campaign and consulted on private sector agriculture investments at Oxfam America. He holds a master's degree in international development and policy analysis from New York University and a bachelor's degree in business administration and economics from the University of Delaware.