

David Goldman is a father, author and activist, devoting his time to public speaking and advocacy work on behalf of victims of international child abduction. David is also co-founder of the Bring Sean Home Foundation (www.BringSeanHome.org).

David fought an inspiring five-year battle to be reunited with his son, Sean, who was abducted to Brazil in June 2004 and returned to the United States on Christmas Eve 2009 – a true Christmas miracle. The case received international media attention and introduced many around the world to the growing, tragic issue of international parental child abduction.

David is the author of A Father's Love: One Man's Unrelenting Battle to Bring His Abducted Son Home (Viking/Penguin 2011), which provides a first-hand account of his fight to reunite with his son and his ongoing advocacy work.

David has testified at numerous congressional hearings on the issue of international child abduction and has consulted members of Congress drafting legislation to reduce the number of internationally abducted children and prevent future abductions. He has called for reforms that would treat the issue as a serious human rights problem and emphasize the need for the swift return of abducted children to their home countries.

An alumnus of Virginia Wesleyan College, David resides in Monmouth County, New Jersey.
