

Mohamed Abubakr is a human rights activists and peacemaker with over a decade of experience in the nonprofit sector. He has founded or served as a director for multiple NGOs focused on humanitarian relief, human rights, youth empowerment and peace programs across MEA, including in Darfur, South Sudan, Egypt, Israel, the Palestinian Territories and beyond. Since arriving to the United States in early 2016, Mohamed was hosted by many universities to address students on variety of topics, including human rights in the MEA region context, the Israel-Arab conflict, grassroots peacebuilding, refugees and gender issues and challenges in conflict affected regions and the challenge of the global refugee crisis. In late 2016, Mohamed launched The African Middle Eastern Leadership Project (AMEL - Arabic for "hope"), a U.S. - based nonprofit organization which seeks to empower Millennial leaders from the Middle East and Africa to build pluralistic societies, and to advocate for policies in Washington that can help both achieve these ends and serve U.S. interests.