

Jamal Said born January 7th 1984 in City of Asasa, Oromia regional state of Ethiopia. He came to the United States in January 1999 for fear of persecution from the repressive regime of Ethiopia. He graduated from Englewood High School in Jacksonville, FL in 2001, and he went to community college of Denver. He earned Associates of science emphasis on pre-pharmacy and transferred to Columbia college and graduated 2009 major in Business Administrations and minor in accounting.

Currently, Jamal Said is the president of Oromo Community of Denver and human rights activist. He is married and father of four children and lives in Aurora, Colorado.