

Latesha Love-Grayer-Grayer

Director
International Affairs and Trade Team
U.S. Government Accountability Office (GAO), CFE

Mrs. Love-Grayer is a Director in GAO's International Affairs and Trade (IAT) team. She has over twenty-three years of experience leading performance and forensic audits in a wide range of federal program and policy areas. In IAT, she leads a cross-cutting portfolio of evaluations examining international policy issues, such as bilateral and multilateral humanitarian and development assistance; refugee and migration issues; efforts to combat international trafficking in persons and arms; international cybersecurity and biosecurity issues; fraud and corruption in international assistance; and issues affecting Pacific Islands and Insular Areas, among others. Prior to IAT, Ms. Love-Grayer spent several years in GAO's Forensic Audits and Investigative Services and Strategic Issues teams leading performance and forensic audits in areas such as consumer financial protection, Medicare, contracting, immigration, taxes and the economy, regulatory policies, human capital management, intergovernmental response and recovery from catastrophic events, and governmentwide efforts to improve the effectiveness and fraud risk management of agencies. She has served as a speaker at various national and international conferences on using data analytics and other leading practices to evaluate the effectiveness of programs and manage federal risks.

Ms. Love-Grayer's work has led to identifying millions of dollars in savings to federal programs as well as a range of changes to federal programs, policies, and legislation that have improved their performance, operations, and risk management.

Mrs. Love-Grayer has a bachelor's degree in political science from Virginia State University and a master's degree in public policy from the University of Michigan's Ford School of Public Policy, among other executive and technical certifications.
