

Dr George Perkovich

George Perkovich is vice president for studies at the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace. He works primarily on nuclear strategy and non-proliferation issues, and on South Asian security.

He is the author of the prize-winning book, India's Nuclear Bomb (University of California Press, 1999), which Foreign Affairs has called 'an extraordinary and perhaps definitive account of 50 years of Indian nuclear policymaking.' In 2016, Oxford University Press will publish his latest book, written with Toby Dalton, on Indian-Pakistani security dynamics, Left of Boom.

Perkovich is co-author with James Acton of the 2008 Adelphi Paper, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons, and co-editor of the subsequent book, Abolishing Nuclear Weapons: A Debate. Perkovich's writing has appeared in Foreign Affairs, Foreign Policy, the Atlantic Monthly, the Weekly Standard, the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal, the Washington Post, the Los Angeles Times, and other publications. His essay, "Giving Justice Its Due," in Foreign Affairs, reflects ongoing work on the challenge of justice in international relations.

On Iran and South Asian security affairs, he has advised many agencies of the U.S. government, and testified before both houses of Congress.

Dr Perkovich served as a speechwriter and foreign policy advisor to Senator Joe Biden (D-Del.) from 1989-90.

He has been a member of the National Academy of Science's Committee on Arms Control and International Security, the Council on Foreign Relations Task Force on Nuclear Policy, and was a principal advisor to the International Commission on Nuclear Nonproliferation and Disarmament, a joint initiative of the governments of Japan and Australia.

Perkovich received a B.A. from the University of California at Santa Cruz, a M.A. in Soviet Studies from Harvard University, and a Ph.D. in Foreign Affairs from the University of Virginia.
