

Terry Anderson, 67, is a retired journalist – a former foreign correspondent in Asia, Africa and the Middle East. He served as Chief Middle East Correspondent for the Associated Press, as well as working as a newspaper editor, tv & radio reporter and documentary producer. He is a former Marine and Vietnam veteran.

Anderson has spent more than ten years as a journalism professor at Syracuse University, Ohio University and the Columbia School of Journalism, among others. He is author of the best-selling book “Den of Lions,” recounting the seven years he was held hostage in Lebanon, and was for eight years a frequent speaker on the international speaking circuit. He holds numerous awards in journalism, as well as for volunteer and charitable work. He is honorary chairman of the Committee to Protect Journalists, which monitors attacks on the press and works to defend journalists around the world. He is also co-chair and founder of the Vietnam Children’s Fund, which has built more than 50 schools in Vietnam.

Anderson is an enthusiastic diver (cave-dive certified and experienced), and a horse lover who has raised and trained young and troubled horses. He currently lives in Gainesville, Florida, where he teaches part-time at the University of Florida.

Anderson holds a double B.A. in journalism and political science from Iowa State University.
