

SCOTT RUTHERFORD

Scott Rutherford is a Senior Partner at McKinsey & Company and is the Managing Partner for the Washington DC Office. He is a leader in the Public Sector (Defense and Security), Organization and the Banking/Insurance Practices.

Scott serves public sector (defense and security agencies) and banking/insurance clients focused on related issues that cut across strategy, operational performance improvement, organization health, human capital, and large-scale transformation.

Additionally, Scott does thematic work in the private equity, payments, telecommunications (wireless, wireline) and non-profit/social sector.

Scott has served both Private and Public Sector institutions very extensively on well over 75 engagements in strategy, operations, organization and governance. He has facilitated numerous strategic planning and organization workshops with senior executives of Fortune 200 institutions and major federal agencies. In addition, he has led capability-building sessions and programs with middle management and front-line personnel to ensure successful translation of strategies into tangible decisions, actions and results.

Prior to joining McKinsey & Company, Scott served as an Armored Cavalry Officer in the U.S. Army and worked in the BioTech Sector. He holds a MBA from Harvard Business School and a BA in chemistry from the University of Kansas.

Scott has worked in the Atlanta, Boston and Washington DC offices.