

With a background in litigation, human capital consulting, and diversity and inclusion, Kelly Sampson brings a variety of experiences to the Brady Team. In particular, she works to reform the gun industry through litigation and research that exposes and redresses the industry's irresponsible marketing and sales practices. Kelly approaches her work with an intersectional lens that addresses the connection between racial justice and gun violence. To that end, she has written a variety of pieces on the intersection of gun violence, white supremacy, racism, and extremism, including "Origin of an Insurrection: How Second Amendment Extremism Led to the January 6 Capitol Attack." In 2016, Sampson and Jon Lowy co-authored The Right Not To Be Shot: Public Safety, Private Guns, and the Constellation of Constitutional Liberties, published in the Georgetown Journal of Law and Policy. Together with Jillian Janflone, Sampson also co-hosts the podcast Red, Blue, and Brady, in which survivors, activists, academics, politicians, and more explore America's firearms epidemic and its underlying causes. Originally from Detroit, Sampson is especially interested in addressing gun violence's disproportionate impact on the Black community. Sampson earned a Bachelor's degree in Public Policy from the University of Michigan and a J.D from Columbia Law school.
